

CONCLUSION

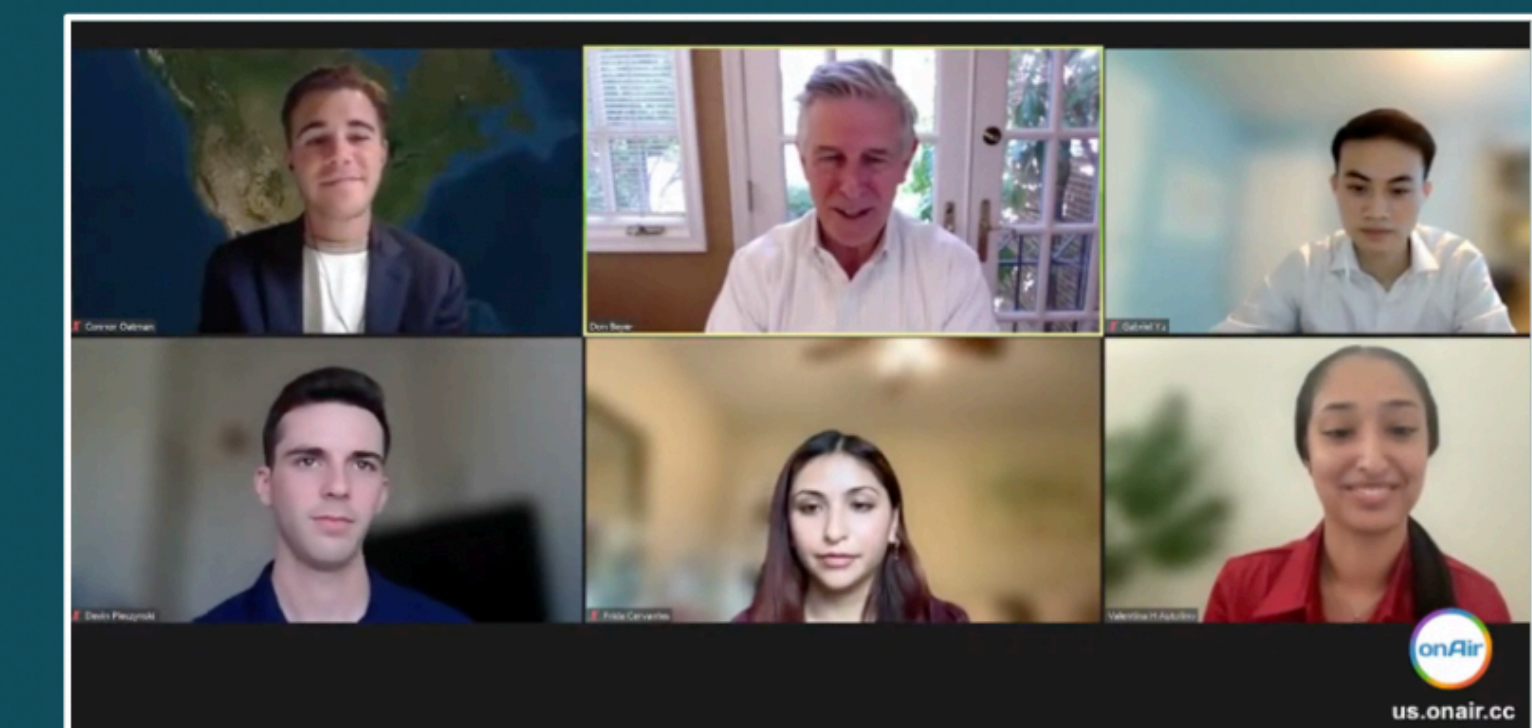

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

1. Learn how to identify and curate important new information concerning politicians, issues, and committees
2. Learn how to organize, produce, and host online, interactive video interviews, debates, and discussions with politicians, other stakeholders, and the general public
3. Learn how to interact with politicians and their staff.
4. Learn how to outreach to volunteers, especially students, organizing and engaging them to become 1 to 2 hour a week volunteers who curate top news and events, moderate discussions, and participate in online video discussions regarding intern work activities or major projects.

My internship experience was insightful as I came to learn more so about the midterm elections and the policy positions of candidates. Due to our nonpartisan philosophy, being able to interview and facilitate discussion in hopes to find common ground was not something I thought I could initially achieve!

Talk with Your Representatives
 Featured Guests and ... Each Other

In AIRCASTS

Student-produced livestreamed online discussions

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Professional development that I gained during this internship are more collaborative teamwork, ability to plan and prioritize, information processing, and ability to engage in discussion despite difference in opinions.

ACADEMIC CONNECTIONS

Although the main goal of US onAir focuses on American politics and governance, there were still some themes that related to our three courses of this semester - democracy in global perspectives, human rights, and international law. For example, topics of the current Russian-Ukrainian war, climate change, and reproductive rights were main topics of discussion during interviews. When researching candidates and politicians, we learned about their policy positions on similar issues that related to academic themes learned.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS & REFERENCES

I would like to give a big thank you to Scott Joy for allowing to be a part of the US onAir team. Scott Joy has been innovate with new ideas and always welcomed the intern team for our own insights. Overall, I am thankful for the program and immersive internship experience.